My Former Friend.

BY W. R. M'LAUREN.

I have a former friend, whose virtues pure,
Unclouded as the sun, have been my guide;
Whose love, whose love, whose love, whose love,
Sweet silence, guided him with her penance
power.

Where willows bend above the quiet stream,
Sharing with sun alternate shade and beam,
His walk was wont to be; there, hour on hour,
Sweet silence, guided him with her penance
power.

Nor there alone the willing grasses lie,
Their morning tears beneath his early tread;
On slopes of green, in meads and cowslip falls,
He heard fond welcomes from the pasture hills.

As, sailing into Indes frequently,
The pilot knows the currents of the sea,
So he knew all the choicest nooks, and where,
To suit himself at noon, in balmy air.

His home a cottage, white and neat, and small,
In forest grand, of oak and maple tall;
Yet there it was, his nature best to please,
That he might dwell, like birds amid the trees.

Sweet soul! may every bud and leaf of Spring
Thrill out for thee a joy on perfumed wing;
And with each ear and Autumn leaf be aired
A gorgeous blessing on the poet's hand!

He sat, serene and pure, at nature's feet,
As child sits to his mother's--posture sweet;
And, looking fondly up with faith and love,
Compels approval from the eye above.

True was his heart, and faithful to the Right;
His faith was ardent, and his hope was bright;
He loved the stars and sun, and earth and sky;
His Mother nature and his Father God.

Wouldst see his riches?--for they're all untold!
Go, seek him in his gums and hoofs of gold;
He points you, smiling, to his garden bowers
--'Yes, 'yes! thank him, I am rich--rich in flowers!'

I know not how it was, but so it seemed,
That loveliness on his young soul gleamed
A sun-rise of true poetry; so high
On Pan's plover his mind was wont to fly.

Seer-like, with eye of fire, would he upstart,
And from dull earth and sense dwell long apart;
Till some bird's note, sudden and clear, would rise
Or leaf would fall, and snatch him from the skies.

To him no gift of utterance was given;
He saw, but sang not of the opened heaven;
His own a poem, filled with thought sublime,
His days were verses, and his actions rhyme.

Yet deem him not ideal and of air;
He faced, and under his strong hand and care,
Gay fields of golden grain and ripened corn
Await the sickle's edge on harvest morn.

The song of birds, that warbled from the blue,
The hum of bees, that buzzed about the dew,
The rustle of leaves, that rustled on the bough,
The rush of waters at the great wheeled mill;

These and all music of the morning hour,
Filled his rapt soul with deep poetic power;
Nor less the less they deepened him away,
The breakfast of the abode of the day.

God never was forgot. The evening prayer
Of awe and awe-eyed child ascended there;
Sweet Sabbath saw a gentle train, betimes,
Obey the summons of the village chimes.

And in all seasons of the day and night,
He saw his God, and worshipped him aright.
True poet-cult he became, and true poet-cult,
And saw a God in all things militant.

Such is my former friend; whose soul so pure,
Unclouded as the sun, have been my guide;
Whose love, whose love, whose love, whose love,
Sweet silence, guided him with her penance
power.

Selected Miscellany.

Distressing Air.

It is a sad sight to see a sick man,
Lying on his bed, and looking so pale,
And to hear him say, 'I am so weak,
I cannot get up, and I cannot eat.'

Business Endurance.

Men of genius without endurance, cannot succeed. Men who start in one kind of business, and then change to another, cannot succeed. Men who change their business too often, cannot succeed.

What Most Merits Compassion.

The persons in America who seem to me to merit compassion most, are not the poor, for of these there are not many, except in a few large cities; those who are to be pitied are the rich. Obtaining wealth by a course of successful industry it would appear as if there were no other means of spending it than in realising splendid mansions, and furnishing them in a style of Oriental luxury, and there after living in gorgeous magnificence like the prince-merchants of Genoa in the past times of Italian glory. So far as the actual founders of fortunes are concerned, there is, perhaps, little to discommend in all this; but there is discommendation in the way in which the sons of these millionaires, born to do nothing but to live upon their father's earnings, were much to be pitied. In New York, they were seen lounging about idly
in the parlors and bar-rooms of the millionaires, and there after living in gorgeous magnificence like the prince-merchants of Genoa in the past times of Italian
glory. So far as the actual founders

of fortunes are concerned, there is, perhaps, little to discommend in all this; but there is discommendation in the way in which the sons of these millionaires, born to do nothing but to live upon their father's earnings, were much to be pitied. In New York, they were seen lounging about idly
in the parlors and bar-rooms of the millionaires, and there after living in gorgeous magnificence like the prince-merchants of Genoa in the past times of Italian
